

FRED STELLA He is an ordained Pracharak for the West Michigan Hindu Temple. He has lectured, facilitated workshops and retreats at schools, churches and in the private sector locally, nationally & internationally. He is also president of Interfaith Dialogue Association, and hosts its weekly radio program on Religion and Spirituality, Common Threads, over NPR affiliate, WGVU-FM.

Besides IDA, Fred holds leadership positions with the West Michigan chapter of the ACLU, American Nepali Students & Women Education Relief & the Hindu American Foundation. In 2012 Grand Rapids Mayor George Heartwell presented Fred with the city's "Champion of Diversity Award" for his work in interfaith relations.

Fred is a regular contributor to the GR Press column, "Ethics & Religion Talk," where he & fellow clergy from various faiths address questions from readers on theology, scriptures & morality.

Professionally, Fred has worked in various forms of media over the last 40 years. This includes time spent as a radio talk show host, newscaster & reporter.